Background Information
This animate video is based on five-year Alberta Education data and was designed to:

- inspire thinking and conversation around the complexities associated with high school completion
- increase dialogue regarding potential next steps in supporting student success.

We need to constantly look at, and reflect on, the barriers that exist for students in being successful in school and ultimately completing high school. We need to understand what the specific barriers are so we can decide what needs to happen. This video highlights one of many projects underway in Alberta. Many of the learnings from these projects can inform jurisdictions across the province in support of capacity building to ensure success for all students.

While Viewing the Video
Think about the following questions as you view this video.

1. How do you define high school completion?
2. What impact does high school completion have on students, parents, teachers, school jurisdictions, and society?
3. Where, as a stakeholder, are you involved in high school completion work and/or where could you be involved?

After Viewing the Video
Use the following discussion questions to inspire conversation.

1. How do you see your role and how does it relate to high school completion?
2. In your role, how would you identify successes that could positively impact high school completion?
3. In your role, what are some barriers that prevent you from positively impacting high school completion?
4. What are some potential next steps you could take to